

Terms and Conditions

This publication is copyrighted by The Joint Commission and therefore protected by United States copyright law. You are expected to comply with the terms of your purchased license, as explained here:

Individual License. Individual publications are intended for single users only. They should not be shared, disseminated, downloaded, or posted for widespread or public use. If more than one individual needs access to a JCR publication, please purchase a site license, which allows for unlimited users working within one facility. For users who do not work within one facility, consider a system license.

Site License. A site license entitles you to share this publication with others in your organization only, either by posting to a secure intranet site or by providing other means of secure access. For users who do not work within one facility, consider a system license.

System License. If you are a corporate system or the central corporate office of a system and plan to share information from this publication with the facilities within your health care or hospital system, or have users who work in multiple facilities, please Contact Us for pricing.

Please Note: If The Joint Commission becomes aware of any infringement on its copyrighted content, it reserves the right to pursue legal action against any or all parties not complying with the terms of this license.

The best way to make certain that you don't violate JCR's copyright protection is to request permission to share content by emailing the below mailbox.

Email JCR Permissions

